INTRODUCTION.

In presenting this number to Members, we must express our gratitude to Mrs. More-Molyneux McCowen, who has allowed us full liberty in transcribing and printing from the famous Collection of Manuscripts in her possession. For the transcription the Society is indebted to Mr. Theodore Craib. The editing and the compilation of the present note have been undertaken by the Honorary Editor and Honorary Secretary.

'Musters.'—Documents of this description have hardly attracted yet so much attention as their interest, not merely on genealogical and topographical, but also on social and economic grounds, deserves. We may notice, however, the Shropshire Muster Lists of 1538[1]; the 1539 Lists for Staffordshire[2]; examples of the same year relating to the Sykrack Wapentake of Yorkshire, and of 1535 for the Claro Wapentake[3]; the valuable papers relating to Clerical Musters in St. Albans Archdeaconry[4] (1590); a volume of Instructions and Various Letters[5] connected with Musters and other matters at a much later period (1626); a short return of the same date and some returns in connection with the Musters that had been made to resist the Spanish Armada of 1588 relating to our county[6]; another return (1640) relating to Staffordshire[7]; and, most important of all, by reason of its completeness and its valuable preface, introduction and notes, an edition of the Returns for Somerset (1569), by Mr. Emanuel Green.[8] From these and the MS. sources it is possible at this stage of our enquiry to settle a few preliminary points of interest, though we must leave for later consideration the discussion of small details of administration by the Surrey mustering authorities in the 16th and 17th centuries.[9]

[9] The parallel case of Somerset may be usefully studied in the work just referred to, which contains information also upon contemporary weapons and drill, and upon the early history of the local military forces. See also an article in the Shropshire Arch. and Nat. Hist. Society's Collections, 2nd series, Vol. II, p. 215.

Thus it is to be observed, first, that the word "Musters" is used in two senses. It may mean the listing of all the arms available in a given district, both those in private hands and those maintained, in virtue of various statutes and Royal orders, by public bodies; or it may mean (more properly) lists of available men more or less classified according to ability and with or without notes of their accoutrement, etc.

Again we may usefully notice the various kinds of document connected with the subject. Thus we have, first, among the Records of Royal Administration, Minutes of Proceedings of the Council and Copies of Instructions sent out both by the Council and the Secretary of State (Privy Council Registers and State Papers Domestic),[1] not to mention the Patents (on the Patent Roll) appointing Commissioners for Musters. Secondly, we have (still at the centre, among the State Papers) all kinds of letters sent in by the Local Authorities and returns by them—actual Musters.[2] Thirdly, we may have local records of the Administration preserved among family papers of the Muster Commissioners, Lords Lieutenant and other officials; these will give us some originals or copies of the Secretary or Council's letters and instructions;[3] memoranda made for the Commissioners' own use;[4] and, most important for our purpose, copies of the Musters preserved locally for reference.[5] Finally, we may have parallels to all these among ecclesiastical Records.[6]

THE LOSELEY MANUSCRIPTS.—The text of the present volume begins with the third of these kinds—locally preserved Muster Books—drawing for the purpose upon the Loseley MSS. This collection comes to us largely from Sir William More (ob. 1600), whose father, Sir Christopher More, originally a clerk of the Exchequer, had acquired the Loseley Estate in the time of Henry VII, and whose representative four generations later (Margaret More, ob. 1704) was the wife of Sir Thomas Molyneux.[7] Sir William More was much connected with Royal Administration, particularly that of the County of Surrey—he was at different times Justice of the Peace, Sheriff, Deputy-Lieutenant, Deputy-Admiral, Commissioner for Musters, Member of Parliament for Guildford and

Knight of the Shire; he was also a close friend of the well-known Sir Thomas Cawarden, whose executor he was and whom he succeeded in the ownership of part of the Blackfriars Estate; and he was a considerable landowner in Surrey. These activities are all reflected in his muniments: we find there deeds and Court Rolls, the titles and records of his (or his family's) Surrey property, going back to very early times;[1] then there are, besides purely private papers, semi-official Memoranda connected with his, or others', work—e.g., in connection with the Musters (specimens of these are printed below); further there are actual local records in the shape of the Muster Books themselves, which will be found in the text of this volume; and finally, there are many documents which are at least closely akin to the Public Records. The extent to which documents which should normally have found their way to the State Paper Office, or to the files of the Exchequer or Chancery, remained in the custody of officials and ultimately became part of their muniments is a marked feature of the Elizabethan period: and the Loseley Collections present us with at least two notable examples of this (both due to Cawarden's official activities) in the shape of Edwardian Inventories of Church Goods,[2] and the remarkable Revels Accounts which have furnished so much material for Elizabethan research.[3] So fine a collection has naturally attracted many scholars. A partial description of the manuscripts, by Mr. A. J. Kempe, was published in 1835; the Historical Manuscripts Commission has dealt with it in one report[4] and is at present engaged in further work upon it; its varied contents have been the subject of much unpublished work[5] and of scattered papers in many places; and it seemed fitting that this Society should draw, for the first volume produced by it, upon the same famous source.

Illustrative Documents.—The four documents here printed belong to the class of semi-official Memoranda mentioned above, and are selected as examples of the work and records incidental to the making of those lists of trained men which form our principal subject. We leave them to speak for themselves, but may, perhaps, preface them by noting that No. (2),

That a presente viewe be taken of all the selected bandes that they and ther furniture maie be sene to be complete and furnished.

Also that care be had of watchinge the Beacons and performinge the former order for defence of the Realme.

Also that a provost marshall be appointed for the punyshinge of [Rogues struck through] Roges vacabondes and spreders of newes and to be assisted by the Justices of peace and ther officers.

[Endorsed] [N]ote of the [C]ounsels Lettres 1588/

THE TEXT.—Leaving until a later stage the elucidation of certain marks and letters affixed to the names in some of these lists, together with inferences concerning such matters as family history and population statistics, we may content ourselves at this point with a few notes upon the way in which the documents are here reproduced and their dating.

Readings.—The Society has laid down the principle that documents transcribed shall appear in the text as nearly as possible in the exact form of the original, saving of course the form of letters and the extension in the text of all abbreviations. General exceptions may be specifically made in particular cases, and this has been done in the present instance, as follows :—

Elizabethan script suffered from the traditions of several centuries during which Latin was the principle language written. Now many English words end in consonants (such as d, l, n and t) which, if they were found ending Latin words, would generally show that the word in question had been abbreviated by suspension (the real termination being cut off), and would accordingly have normally, when they occurred in this final position, a mark of abbreviation. The result of this is that such final consonants are frequently abbreviated in English writing without, apparently, any real intention of indicating an omitted letter; and we have accordingly in the present case taken no notice of such final flourishes when attached to the letters d, l, (or ll), and n.

As regards the dots and crosses which precede many of the names, every care has been taken to reproduce them as they were intended to stand. In the case of the dots, however, it cannot always be guaranteed whether their appearance in the original is intentional or due to some accidental pen-mark or blotting off from the opposite page. Touching the crosses, we should note that these, where they occur against a succession of names, are represented in the MS. in many cases by one long cross. For typographical reasons, it has been necessary to give here each name its own cross where it appeared to be due, but it cannot always be asserted with any certainty how many names the long cross of the MS. was intended to include.

The following variations from the original have been made in order to economise space :—

(a) The omission of the brackets which occur on the left-hand side of the men's names.

(b) The descriptions, e.g., "Pike men selected," "Bill men selected," or the place-names which are written against these brackets on the left are printed as headings.

(c) Certain lists are printed in double column, although the originals are in single column.

(d) Purely ornamental flourishes and dashes, unattached to any word, occasionally occur. These have been omitted.

Dates.—Lists I, II and III all bear original dates and no difficulty arises in connection with them in this respect. List IV should have been here dated throughout as c. 1583–4. It has no contemporary indication of date, but from the fact that the men's names show very slight variations from those in List III, being given very frequently in precisely the same order, it can only be separated from the latter by a very few years, either before or after.

List V. From a comparison with Court Rolls and other documents, Mr. P. Woods is inclined to date this about the year 1575. The editors had previously compared it with the Muster Roll of 1569 in the State Papers, and from the fact that where the same names occur in both lists, the man in our Loseley MS. almost invariably held a less exalted position than that held by him in the List of 1569 (e.g., the archer of the second sort in the former would be the archer of the best sort in the latter), had formed the opinion that the Loseley List was slightly the earlier in date. If Mr. Woods is right, however, it follows that the difference in standing must be attributed, not to promotion, as the editors had thought, but to a loss of efficiency due to declining age. It will also follow that the Document we have printed above as (2), which was evidently written soon after 1573, relates very probably to the same Muster.
